The High School Program

Tichon Ramah Yerushalayim (TRY), the Ramah Jerusalem High School, has been serving North American teens since 1982. TRY is an international co-ed school in Israel offering students an academic curriculum of high-level general studies parallel to that being followed in their home communities, as well as a superior course of Hebrew, Jewish studies, and Israel studies that is possible only in Jerusalem. TRY offers an academic quarter (two months) and semester (four months) program. TRY is an all-encompassing framework, designed to provide students with a stimulating cross-cultural experience while focusing on their personal and Jewish development.

Our program includes students in 10th, 11th, and 12th grade. Our average enrollment is 40-60 students per semester. All TRY students continue their education after high school.

Courses

TRY offers a full complement of general studies courses. All classes are built around students' needs from their home schools.

Israel Core Course: Ancient to Modern History of Israel and the Middle East

The Israel Core Course (ICC) is a key component of the TRY program, combining both classroom and field-based learning. The course consists of three classroom lectures per week and two weekly field trips. Overnight field trips, projects, and seminar days augment classroom learning. ICC trips are arranged both chronologically and thematically. ICC provides a comprehensive history of Israel from biblical times to the modern state.

In addition, students participate in a seven day seminar in Poland, learning the history of Eastern European Jewry and the Holocaust.

Students can take ICC for college credit through Gratz College. It is the equivalent of three classes, each worth three credits: The Rise of Biblical Civilization; Jews in Medieval Christendom and the Orbit of Islam; and Israel Today: Continuity and Change. Students participating in the academic quarter earn only three credits.

Hebrew Language and Literature

Hebrew language instruction is required for all students. Students are placed according to level. Advanced classes integrate literary readings, conversation and content connected to the Israel Core Course into the curriculum.
